Wooling Hill Memorial Estate is a premier provider of cremation memorial spaces in Victoria, a beautifully presented venue for funerals, memorial services, and family celebrations at a stunning location in the Macedon Ranges Baringo Valley, only a 35-minute drive from the Northern Suburbs of Melbourne.

The Robertson family established the Estate in 1840 – one of the earliest settlements in the district, pre-dating the establishment of Gisborne. The Robertson family cemetery is one of Victoria's oldest cemeteries and still stands at Wooling Hill, marked in the fashion of those times by Italian cypresses and hand-made posts. Since 1999 Wooling Hill has been a dedicated memorial sanctuary, providing a place for the resting of ashes and family visits to last forever.

In early 2020, Liddy and Troy Upfield purchased Wooling Hill Memorial Estate and will conserve the historical significance of its predecessors and ensure that future generations can connect with the places, values, traditions and experiences that capture their heritage. The living landscape of the Estate provides homage to the past from which we have come and to the future we seek to build as a community.

A botanical sanctuary with 16 hectares of well-groomed lawns and gardens, with extensive grounds consisting of immaculate lawns, mature trees, and shrubs coupled with lakes and water features. The European-style gardens boast an extraordinary collection of exotic plants, thousands of mature trees, and breathtaking views around the Macedon Ranges. The Estate offers a tranquil and dignified final resting place for your loved one's ashes and a beautiful place to create a living memorial to honour your family heritage. Families have created a beautiful legacy for future generations to visit at Wooling Hill.

Wooling Hill offers a sustainable alternative to traditional cemetery burials and accommodates the modern need for cremation. Families can rest assured they loved ones are at peace with nature forever.
